"The Blood Bank needs at least 200 more donors and we plan to intensify the drive in Bay St. Louis and to extend it out into the county," Glover stated.

The committee said that persons holding credit Blood Donor cards may mail them to George Heitzmann at the courthouse. He will record the facts from the card and return it and a new Hancock County Blood Bank card to the donor.

Entertains at Luncheon

Mrs. J. W. Hill Jr. entertained a few close friends at a luncheon at her home on Monday.

Guests included Mrs. Bert Ramsey, Mrs. Lewis Wagner, Mrs. Norman Renshaw, Mrs. George Lehleiner, Mrs. Bert Quigley and Mrs. John Griffin.

Mrs. Hoefeld said she is "neck deep" in mortar mix and string and all the conversation that goes with building. The home should be complete within the next six to eight weeks.

The first proposal in more than a decade to repeal Mississippi's poll tax fixed by the 1890 constitution will be introduced today in the House by Rep. Walter James Phillips.

The Phillips measure calls for submitting the question to a statewide vote to strike the poll tax provision from the state constitution.

It would require approval of a majority of the voters of the state for ratification.

Mississippi is one of the six remaining Southern states which charge a poll tax as a prerequisite for voting. The tax is fixed by the constitution at $2 per year, but counties can charge as much as $3 per year. Revenues from it go to schools.

"It is my belief that democracy is best served when the maximum number of people vote," Phillips declared.

He said that "the poll tax has outlived the purpose for which it was primarily designed."

The Gulf Coast legislator said that he felt that the measure is approved by the Legislature, he would draft legislation to provide adequate laws on registration and qualifications of voters to replace the poll tax law.

He said that if the measure is approved by the Legislature, he would draft legislation to provide adequate laws on registration and qualifications of voters to replace the poll tax law.

Mothers March On Polio To Be Made Fri.

A vaccine has been developed which is felt will prevent paralysis in polio cases.

However, the cost of experimentation is asked by the Foundation from everyone.

Mrs. Patrick Murphy, who is working so hard with the current drive locally has requested that each family try to double their contribution when the "Mother's March" for the 1954 campaign takes place tomorrow night.

Mrs. Murphy said that "if the average contribution is doubled by all who can give, be their gift large or small, the National need will be met and backing for the vaccine trials and for other phases of polio prevention will be obtained."

"Therefore," continued Mrs. Murphy, "I appeal to every parent, grandparent, uncle and aunt in Hancock County to give more in 1954 to your 'Mothers March' Friday night."

YOUR HOBBY COLUMN

Bone Specialist, Piano and Dolls Led To One Bay Woman's Hobby

BY KATHERINE WILSON

A bone specialist — a piano — and dolls would seem to have no relation to one another — but as cause and effect they are directly responsible for the miniature scenes and character dolls I display occasionally as a hobby these days.

When a bone specialist said my small son should have piano lessons to keep his fingers active and prevent atrophy of the arm muscles, I thought hastily of our tiny three room house on a 70 acre fruit farm. We couldn't get a piano into it even if we had one! So I had to think up a substitute—and found the answer in my son's enthusiasm for the stage.

My father's theatrical friends had taken him all through the "backstage" world of the theatre—and while we often viewed performances from the audience—my youngsters spent much time visiting the dressing rooms and playing with the pets belonging to members of the casts. So I knew a miniature theatre would get full credit.

We had clothes pins, water colors, beads and a rag bag. A suit box with the lid cut to shape and painted gaily to resemble a stage set. These were the beginnings—the clothes pins with painted faces and toothpick arms were very effective and when suspended on fine wires which attached to the fingers, became lifelike.

I was so delighted with the original ideas my little son carried out in group action with his "little people" I made scenes to go with them. Then our farm foreman became intrigued and soldered flashlight sockets to an insulated bar and made footlights. That's how our first puppet show was born.

In the beginning my son amused his baby sister who proved a most enthusiastic audience until she grew old enough to become a partner in the show! By then a new baby brother served as audience only by this time the clothes pins were talking and transposing (with great liberties) Shakespeare and ghost stories impartially.

When the children were 14, 10 and 6 years of age I made a real motion picture show for them as a Christmas gift. It had a beautiful proscenium and footlights made from two antique doll lights made from two antique doll lights. The picture was a very leaf picture frame. Its opening was braced on antique bronze chandeliers turned upside down. The inside was of black chintz with ivory floored pattern and the stage curtains were of dull gold Portobello. The footlights and spot lights operated on a battery switch which, with the corky cord, hung the travesty curtains, were placed where the six year old member of the troupe could control them.

The marionettes were from 10 to 14 inches high according to character and had eight strings each. I have always hated grotesque and distorted figures and made a point of making the marionettes as true to life as possible both in proportion and appearance.

The children each adopted a puppet of his own and a little 12-year-old neighbor became an official member of the cast.

My eldest son, the inspiration for the original puppets, as the veteran operator, selected "Happy," the little clown. My daughter, who had designed the costumes, took the "Sporty" fish. "Santa Claus," our little neighbor took charge of the accessory puppets with the Fairy Godmother as her special charge, and my baby son operated the dragon "Clarence," who breathed smoke. The baby was also our lights and curtain man.

The children wrote their own plays and put them on for Church benefits. Among our marionettes was a spider named "Taps," because he could talk with all eight legs. Inasmuch as he was a beautiful spider, made of black velvet and silver glitter, the children all adored him.

"Happy" was Master of Ceremonies and would introduce "Taps" to the audience of children by telling them he was a shy spider and afraid of children because his legs could so easily be hurt, and then he couldn't dance—and that he loved to dance better than anything—so if the children wouldn't frighten him, then the famous "Taps" would dance for them. Following his initial dance "Taps" would ask the children to join in the program and sing for him and he would dance to their singing.

The children all adored the show, and it was hard to pick the most popular puppet.

"Happy" and "Clarence," the smoke-breathing dragon, did a number together. It was a takeoff from St. George and the Dragon, and "Happy" with sword in hand would battle the fiery dragon! This particular act was a great favorite.

The children not only became very clever operating the puppets. They learned to write their plays around the trick actions of the puppets. Believe it or not, no two puppets are alike. You can't make two alike. Some are very funny—some are dignified—some dance well, and others can't dance at all!

The children also learned a lot about audience reaction, and grew clever at ad libbing.

When public performances were given the children never appeared before the show. The audience always saw the show with no idea of who pulled the strings. At the close of the final curtain I would appear and introduce each child with his or her puppet—and a gasp was always the response from the audience at the sight of such young children controlling the puppets, and nearly always were urged to operate their "dolls" in front of the curtains to convince the spectators it was really their handling of the puppets that gave the action.

Later, when my son, Bill, was ten

The Mother - Daughter basketball game at SJA Monday night was very successful. The Mothers proved to their daughters that they are not so old by coming out the winners by five points.

Barbara Flink and De De Oliverista received silver basketballs at the Baton Rouge tournaments for the most outstanding players on the SJA team. Barbara also received a trophy for the most outstanding guard. Quite a few of the SJA students along with their mothers followed the team to Baton Rouge for the games.

Practically everyone that attended the dance at SSC Saturday night spoke of what a wonderful time they had. They couldn't help but have a good time.

Years ago he wrote a play for the Girl Scouts in Bay St. Louis. Leave it to an author (even at the tender age of ten years) to make it difficult for a producer. Bill created for his play "Pete Penguin" and "Santa Claus." Santa was easy to make, but I perspired freely over Pete—for my son Bill is a perfectionist and Pete had to be right. But with a black velvet huck and a white satin front, red velvet feet and red beak, Pete proved to be a grand actor, and is still my son's mascot, being with him today in Korea.

KEEPING PACE with Prospering Mississippi

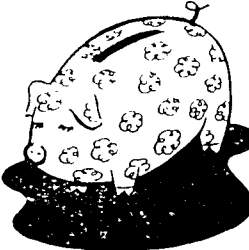

MISSISSIPPI'S great economic improvement in recent years has been accompanied by a record-breaking demand for telephone service. Many customers, too, have been forced to wait for individual lines and two-party lines instead of four-party service.

Southern Bell is doing everything possible to keep pace with your growing telephone needs. In the past eight years we have more than doubled the number of individual and two-party line customers and raised the total number of telephones in the State from 115,736 to approximately 258,000.

The total cost of telephone expansion and improvement projects in Mississippi since 1945 has exceeded $2 million dollars, and more millions must be spent this year if we are to keep up with the demand for more telephones and improved service.

Expansion Dollars?

To get investors to supply the money to continue expanding and improving telephone service requires a fair profit on the money already invested in telephone equipment.

BAY HIGH NEWS

The Senior play, "Apple Blossom Time," by Eugene O'Hare, has been ordered. This comedy with a touch of mystery will be a delightful play to be presented at an early date.

The Tigerettes of Bay High defeated the girls team from Poplarville by a score of 47-34 Friday night, Jan. 22 in the Bay High gym.

High Scorer for this game was Rosemary Millinery with 34 points. On Monday night, January 25, the Tigerettes were again victorious. This time the victim was Industrial from Pearl River County. The score was 37-24 with Rosie Millinery getting 16 points to top scoring honors. The Bay guards looked very good in holding Industrial this low on the opposing team's floor.

Bay High girls are next scheduled to play Wednesday night at 8 o'clock in the Invitational Tournament here.

A group of Sophomore students plans to entertain the student body and faculty at assembly in a hilarious one-act play entitled "A Happy Ending." The scene is in Russia in the home of Tatyana Ivanovna, a Russian marriage broker. Tatyana has searched long and hard to find husbands for her six young and lovely clients, but a scarcity of men prevails. When Nikolay Stepanovich Dubrovsky calls looking for a wife, he is met with overwhelming cordiality. Tatyana sees in him so good a prospect that she keeps him for herself.

Taking part in the play are: Ronald Maurig, Clara Lee Ketchum, Shirley Miller, Noleen Ladner, Evelyn Ladner, Glenda Johnson, Rita Morel, Patricia Ann Lusch and Carol Horton. Mrs. Georgette Hall is directing the play.

The February meeting of the PTA has been changed from Tuesday, February 9, to Thursday, February 11, at eight o'clock in the evening. Mrs. C. C. McDonald will speak at the meeting which also is in celebration of Founder's Day. Her topic will be "The History of PTA." Mr. Robert Brown, Band Director, will also present his students in a musical program.

A special assembly program was called Tuesday morning, Jan. 26. Mr. S. J. Ingram, Superintendent, opened the program with an announcement that students would rise during the playing of the National Anthem, broadcast to the students through the newly acquired communication system. Following the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner," all students joined the pledge of allegiance to the flag. Superintendent Ingram announced that efforts are being made to record the school Alma Mater and the Fight Song, which will be played at pep rallies next year.

First grade pupils are glad to welcome Frances Chapman from Waveland into their group. Patricia Choina has been ill in King's Daughters Hospital. Hurry and get well, Pat.

The sixth grade will present "Holiday Appreciation" Friday for the assembly program.

Kit and Kaboodle

BY KIT MICHAEL

A diamond may be a flawless gem of superlative beauty, but if it is mounted in the wrong setting, it might as well be a dreary, lack-lustre bit of glass. Just so with those cut flowers that come in a box from the florist, or the wild flowers someone brings in from the country. They can be perfect blooms and still end their days completely unnoticed if they are merely thrust into any old vase that happens to be nearby.

The container, is an integral part of any floral arrangement. Although it should never be the dominant element, it must have definite relationship to the flowers it holds—in color, size, form, texture and period style. This does not mean that you need a tremendous collection of vases and bowls to accommodate everything from daisy daisies to the most exotic blooms. Although such collections have become widespread as a popular hobby, recent years, the solution of the container problem can be easily solved. This solution is found in looking at your own possessions from a new point of view.

Your kitchen is filled with a variety of interesting objects for informal flowers. On your china and crystal shelves are many bowls and vases which are perfectly designed for the more exotic blooms. And among your sentimental treasures and heirlooms are some of the most interesting containers of all. Sometimes these objects are so familiar that their possibilities escape us. Yet they afford the best opportunity for really ingenious flower compositions.

Whether you are setting the table for a very special party, or just an everyday family meal, color can be your chief ally for creating the mood to suit the occasion. We all react emotionally to the colors around us and since mealtime should always be a pleasant time, it is particularly important that all table accessories and decorations have harmonious color relationships, with no jarring, restless qualities.

So when planning the colors for your table, consider their general psychological characteristics. For instance, red is provocative, exciting—a rich, glamorous accent for other colors. You'll be wise to use it sparingly on the table, or it may dominate even the conversation. Yellow is merry, with the gay, warming effect of sunshine... particularly good in its light, clear hues. But watch it as it goes toward the red side, for it is apt to become tiresome and restless, particularly when used in quantity.

The lighter blues are airy and fresh, valuable for setting off other colors. On the other hand, too much blue, in the purer tones, acts as a depressant and gives us a "blue mood." Green has been called the normal color and we feel comfortable with it, probably because of its familiarity as the most widespread color in nature. It is never depressing or sedative in effect, and is most dependable as a background for more brilliant colors, playing them up just as green foliage gives importance to bright flowers. But do watch your lighting when green predominates in highly reflective surfaces, such as china or glass. A direct overhead light may turn all the faces around the table a horrible sickly green! On such small but important points can depend the success of any meal or party.

So often the loveliest of flowers wither and die before they should. The ordinary life of a flower is a few days, a week at the most. With the aid of the new preservatives on the market today, one can enjoy their cut almost twice as long as expected. The following rules will assure you longer life for your lovelies.

1. Fill the container you have selected with cool water. Stir in a flower preservative, obtainable from your florist, following EXACTLY the directions on the envelope or box. Don't overdo it. Use in correct proportions, a flower preservative prevents or retards bacterial growth, adds to the life span of cut flowers, helps develop unopened buds on spike flowers, encourages fuller blooms, and prevents fading.

2. Next, remove all foliage from the lower portion of the stems—the part to be submerged in water. Otherwise, these leaves may decay and clog cells, preventing the flowers from getting the necessary water.

3. Cut stems on a long, diagonal slant with a very sharp knife so they can absorb water easily. Never use scissors. Place flowers in water the instant their stems are cut.

4. Now you can arrange the flowers permanently as you wish. The addition of a little cool water as required every day or so. You do not need to change the water, re-cut the stems or disturb your arrangement in any way.

5. If you do not have a flower preservative on hand, prepare the flowers as outlined in all other details. To ensure long life in this case, the water must be changed and an inch cut from each stem daily. Always cut on a diagonal slant. Although this requires more of your time, it does give you an opportunity to vary the design of the flower arrangement from day to day.

Nearly a hundred years ago, an English missionary found a beautiful lily growing wild on a small island just south of Japan. He was so delighted with its dignified stateliness that he took some of the bulbs with him when he returned home. But on the long voyage, the tiny ship he was sailing on was blown far off its course by adverse winds. It finally managed to put into the harbor of St. George in Bermuda. There the missionary accepted the friendly hospitality of Rev. Mr. Roberts, Rector of Radnor, and to show his appreciation he gave the rector a few of the lily bulbs for his garden.

The Bay Waveland Home Demonstration Club held its January meeting at the home of Mrs. Randolph Bourgeois, who also gave the devotional.

Mrs. Gerald Tucker, president, gave a report on Council meeting and also read County Council Constitution.

Committees for 1954 were selected by Mrs. Tucker, 4-H Adviser, Mrs. William Anderson; Better Home chairman, Mrs. Earl Gates; Garden Leader, Mrs. Raymond Nelson; Recreation, Mrs. Phillip Hayes; Health Chairman, Mrs. Roger Bordag; Finance Committee, Mrs. K. T. Breland, Mrs. Franz Wood, Mrs. M. J. Ruppel, Mrs. Joe Caciopo; Exhibit Committee, Mrs. Ernest Yates, Mrs. Althea Helms, Mrs. Rosalie Benigno, Mrs. Louis Moreau, Mrs. Victoria Wheeler.

Program for 1954: February, Metal tapping, March, Outdoor Furnishings, April, Picture study and framing, May, Health; June, Makeup and styling; July, Pointers for fair; August, Recreation; September, Nutrition; October, Care of sewing machine attachments; November, Christmas decorations and gift suggestions; December, Party.

Members selected the month they wished to be hostess for the coming year.

Miss Sarah Weaver, agent, gave demonstration on leather and woodcraft. Members were shown how to make leather gloves. Miss Weaver also spoke on bills which are to be presented to the Senate for passing, advising members to contact their representative letting him know their views on certain bills.

K. H. Buckley, horticulturist, spoke to the group and gave hints on year around garden plans, pest control and put into the harbor of St. George in Bermuda. There the missionary accepted the friendly hospitality of Rev. Mr. Roberts, Rector of Radnor, and to show his appreciation he gave the rector a few of the lily bulbs for his garden.

Refreshments of cookies, coconuts, sugared pecans and soft drinks were served by Mrs. Randolph Bourgeois and Mrs. Jos. Caciopo.

his garden. The maritime climate of Bermuda was so similar to that of the natural habitat of the species that the lilies flourished, and within a generation became a feature of the island.

A Philadelphia nurseryman, W. K. Harris, saw these lilies about 1876 and recognized the great commercial possibilities in importing the bulbs and forcing them in time for Easter.

And so Bermuda became the first region to grow this species of lily commercially, and for many years had the world Easter Lily market practically to itself. This important industry literally owed its beginning to the vagaries of the wind and sea—and to a missionary's admiration for the splendor of a wild flower.

Legend has it that gladioli sprang up from swords driven into the ground by two brothers who had been quarreling over the division of inherited land. After much bloody give and take, they remembered their family ties and decided to make peace with each other.

As a gesture of trust and friendship, they drove their weapons into the earth. And there in time, the first gladioli bloomed, sheathed in the unmistakable shape of sword blades. Perhaps this is why these flowers were once known as sword flags or sword lilies, but it is fact that name gladiolus is derived from the Latin word gladius, meaning sword.

When or where the quarrel took place is unknown, but actual evidence of gladioli was described in the second century by the Greek doctor, Dioscorides, who called them corn lilies. In England, the gladiolus became popular when Queen Victoria ordered the flower grown for the royal table after her visit to Fontainebleau during the 1850's. Although a concerted effort to propagate the gladiolus in America was only started some fifty years ago, "glads" are a ranking favorite today.

INFORMATION

BY R. G. HUBBARD JR.
SUPERVISOR, BEAT 5

As I stood in the Sheriff's Office a few days ago, I overheard a man complaining that every year taxes go up. Even though I am a member of the Board of Supervisors, I am of the same opinion.

During the month of July 1952 when the Land Roll was made up, the Board was in session for 18 days and tried every day to convince me that the assessments should be raised. I would not agree to go along with this and finally on July 18, 1952 the following motion was made.

"Motion Jones, 2nd. Lott Assessment rolls to be raised 100% over rolls of previous year."

Voting Yea - Jones, Lott, Keller Voting Nae - Hubbard."

I would like the people to particularly notice how the voting went on this motion, for after being made and carried, it was deliberately omitted from the minutes of the Board. Could this have been because they wanted to keep the people in the dark as to who raised their assessments?

It is a grave injustice to the people of Hancock County to have their taxes raised. When I took office there was one Supervisor who, after operating his District for four years, had about $24,000 left over—that is, after all his bills were paid. This same man, after having too much money with which to operate his District voted to double our assessment. Bear in mind, approximately 70% of all tax money comes from the taxpayers of District 5.

The biggest business in Hancock County is our resort business—the people from New Orleans who own homes here and spend money with our merchants. This action of the Board affected all of our New Orleans people, who were already paying higher taxes than they should.

In my opinion taxes could be lowered, instead of raised, if there were less purchases of Wood Preservative, Grader Blades, Motor Cleaner and Hydraulic Oils.
